

From the Fire Chief

In October, the OCFA experienced yet another year-over-year increase, with our dispatchers receiving 19,890 calls and our firefighters responding to over 15,100 all-hazard emergencies. My pride in our operational excellence amid this ongoing uptick is tempered by the fact that it does not always come without a cost to our firefighters.

Dear OCFA Family:

Yes, we are a national model when it comes to the largest effort ever undertaken to understand and reduce the risk of cancer among U.S. firefighters, as evidenced by our recent designation as the first agency in California and the first large metro in the nation to achieve Gold Helmet Department status from the National Firefighter Registry (NFR).

Yes, on work-related cancer alone, the OCFA continues to implement best practices — from new station designs that prioritize reductions in carcinogen exposure to our progress in securing what will likely be the state's first departmentissued enhanced liquid CO2 dry cleaning machines. And yes, with Local 3631, we've made real progress in destigmatizing mental and behavioral health awareness and encouraging members to seek support.

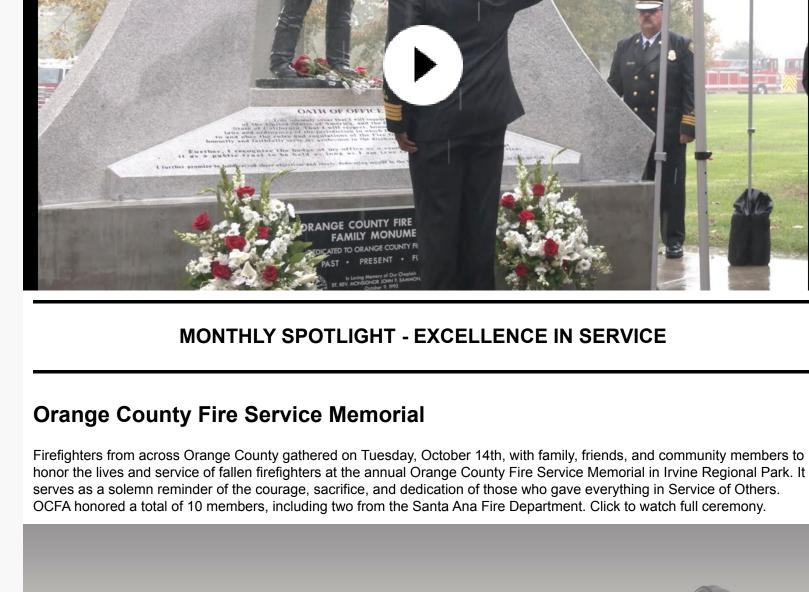

All that success notwithstanding, the dangers of this work cannot be completely mitigated. And while all OCFA firefighters willingly take those risks, the reality of the job's dangers was all the more poignant the past two months as the OCFA and Local 3631 participated in several annual events honoring our fallen, including the IAFF Fallen Firefighter Memorial, the California Firefighters Memorial Ceremony, and the Orange County Fire Services Memorial. These events, coupled with the first anniversary of the Handcrew buggy rollover on the Airport Fire and the fifth anniversary of the burnover on the Silverado Fire, are stark reminders of the dangers of our work and the courage with which our OCFA firefighters answer the call. It also underscores the importance of the entire OCFA family who ensure our frontline first responders have the equipment, training, and support they need not only to protect life and property, but also to return safely home to their other family – spouses, children, and loved ones. With that in mind, before you scroll through this Bulletin, I ask that you watch the short video below, which captures just a few of the touching moments from each of our recent memorial ceremonies. In doing so, you join all of us who had the privilege of attending these events in honor of the OCFA firefighters who passed away in recent years, including the heroes who made the ultimate sacrifice In Service of Others. And just as their impact will forever endure — in the careers of those they mentored, in the lives of the patients they saved, in the homes of the communities they protected, and in the family legacies of the children they raised — so too must our efforts to continuously honor them. That is the gift our fallen heroes leave us with, and I'm honored to join all of you in further sharing it through the kind of OCFA excellence highlighted throughout this Bulletin.

Sincerely, Brian Fennessy Fire Chief
